GFFA 2018 - Global Forum for Food and Agriculture

Category	Date	Time:	Location
Trade Event	January 18, 2018	12:00 - 17:30	CityCube Berlin

The GFFA is an international conference that focuses on central issues regarding the future of the global agri-food industry. It was held in Berlin during the International Green Week (IGW) and took place for the ninth time this year. The forum gives representatives from the worlds of politics, business, science and civil society an opportunity to share ideas and agree on political reference points on a selected topic of current agricultural policy within the context of food security. The GFFA is organised by the Federal Ministry of Food and Agriculture (BMEL) in cooperation with GFFA Berlin e.V., the Senate of Berlin and Messe Berlin GmbH.

Under the title "Agriculture and Water – Key to Feeding the World", the GFFA brought together over 2,000 visitors from 136 different countries in Berlin this year, including 83 agriculture ministers. Furthermore, representatives of young farmers from around the globe, nine international organisations, such as FAO and OECD, and the European Commission attended the Berlin Agriculture Ministers' Conference and were actively involved in the debate.

At the different events held during the GFFA, representatives of science, business, civil society and politics discussed what role agriculture, as a major user of water, could play globally in the sustainable stewardship of water as a valuable resource and in maintaining water quality, how it could be ensured that, given the increasing competition over water usage, agriculture had access to water, and hence could provide the global population with food, and how agriculture could contribute its considerable potential regarding the use of water as a resource towards political processes at international level. The many events carried out under GFFA 2017 provided important impetus for future global developments in the area of "Agriculture and Water".

This year's GFFA thus once again offered one of the most important international platforms for dialogue on the topics of agriculture, food security and nutrition and, being the biggest agriculture ministers' meeting in the world, it also remains the most significant driver of the international agricultural agenda.

Associations, companies, universities and the BMEL showcase their work in the agri-food sector. In contrast to the exhibition halls at the International Green Week, the focus here is primarily on the presentation of projects rather than products. The Cooperation Market and the affiliated Business Lounge provide space and opportunity for dialogue and exchange of experiences. It is an ideal setting for specialist visitors and exhibitors to enter into conversation.

In the upcoming GFFA 2018 the Cooperation Market will take place on Thursday and Friday (18th and 19th January 2018) to increase networking opportunities between trade visitors, associations, companies, universities and organisations from the agro-food sector.

Kick-off Event GFFA 2018

The kick-off event marks the official start of the GFFA events that will take place from 18 to 20 January 2018.

The GFFA brings together high-level representatives of the global agri-food industry and representatives from politics, the business and scientific communities and civil society. The kick-off event is entitled "Shaping the future of livestock" and will outline the manifold facets of this subject and give an introduction to the issues to be discussed at the conference.

On the GFFA's tenth anniversary, the structure of the kick-off event has been revamped: it will be a combination of the previous conventional kick-off event and the international panel discussion. The following persons will discuss this year's subject in the context of a panel discussion:

Blairo Maggi: Brazilian Minister of Agriculture (tbc),

Peter Bleser: Parliamentary State Secretary at the BMEL and master farmer, A representative of Welthungerhilfe (tbc),

Jimmy Smith: Director of the International Livestock Research Institute (ILRI) and

Peter Giørtz-Carlson: Executive Vice President and Chief Commercial Officer Europe of Arla Foods.

The kick-off event will be followed by other exciting and informative events during GFFA that are hosted by the Federal Ministry of Food and Agriculture (BMEL) in cooperation with the Berlin Senate, Messe Berlin GmbH and GFFA Berlin e.V..

The BMEL would like to extend a warm invitation to the public, media representatives and trade visitors to attend the kick-off event and the other exciting events during GFFA!

GFFA Expert Panel 2: Future-oriented implementation of animal welfare laws

Animal welfare laws constitute the legal framework for animal husbandry. They define minimum standards for animal husbandry, transport and slaughter. Each society has its own values which are reflected in national laws. At the same time, supranational rules (for example at the EU level, in the United States of America) provide the legal framework.

Producers often see the competitiveness of domestic agriculture at risk if national animal welfare laws go beyond supranational requirements. On the other hand, citizens and consumers from countries in which animal welfare is of major importance, argue for a greater consideration of their values and thus stricter animal welfare laws.

The expert panel will clarify the question of the extent to which unilateralism in animal welfare legislation negatively affects production and which effect it has in improving animal welfare. To this aim, representatives from countries in which animal welfare laws which go substantially beyond the requirements of the supranational framework legislation will have their say. Examples of such implementations are the UK, where gestation crates for sows were already abolished in 1999, Sweden, which prescribes the grazing of dairy cows, or California, which has introduced the

Subsequently, the effects of this law on production, trade and animal welfare are discussed by a scientist from the same country. The lectures are designed in a timely fashion so that sufficient time is available for the general discussion.

GFFA Expert Panel 3: Africa's livestock potential – traditional solutions for the future?

In Africa, some 25 million small-scale, partially non-sedentary livestock breeders and keepers live. They breed sheep and goats, keep camels, donkeys and small livestock. They manage the dry land sustainably, are extremely adaptable and have a thousand-year-old tradition. Nevertheless, two-thirds of them live under the poverty line, they have no political voice and no economic market position. Farmers in general struggle increasingly with the difficult climatic conditions and the available land often too small for efficient, modern and income-securing farming. Furthermore, it is to be expected that as a result of climate change, up to one million square kilometers of land for food-farming will be dried up by 2050 – but not for livestock farming. Over 30 million people are currently living in these zones.

The breeding of small livestock such as chickens, rabbits, pigs or goats can be an alternative for many. Efficient structures have to be developed, in particular, in communal projects involving the use of technological innovations. From the development of larger herds, through the joint higher-quality processing and marketing of products such as milk, eggs and meat as well as wool to the utilization of natural fertilizer and the animals themselves.

For both “new farmers” and “traditional farmers”, local value chains have to be built up and promoted in order to allow the breeders themselves to benefit from the production as well. This will improve the livelihoods of farmers and of the region in general. A few large farms are not the key solution in this context.

The discussion will focus on the following topics:

- increase production and develop a better market position for livestock and products,
- maintain animal health,
- increase local added value (abattoirs, dairy),
- modernization of methods and use of adapted feed.

GFFA Expert Panel 4: Food of Animal Origin 2030: What do consumers want? Economic, Social and Ecological Challenges and Possible Solutions

In the coming years, demand for animal based food products will rise substantially. This will not only have implication on the quantity and the trade volume of such products. What do consumers in the different regions of the world expect? What are the kinds of animal products and their quality they demand? What are the conditions under which consumers find, milk, meat and eggs acceptable? How to respect the planetary boundaries with growing demand and production requirements?

GFFA Expert Panel 5: Feed for Life! – Alternatives in the Feeding Sector

The global feed production sustains millions of people by providing food, work and income. Major developments in recent decades have made breeding, feeding and farming far more productive than ever before, thus pushing the growth of the animal sector and intensifying the output of individual animal life-cycles. As a result 'modern' animals, including fish, produce more meat, eggs or milk than ever before.

Yet this rapid increase comes at a price: already one third of the global agricultural land is being used to grow feed crop, and large proportions of the worldwide fish catch end up in various animal feed products. The actual kind of production leads in many cases to manifold environmental issues which should be reduced. Furthermore animals fed with food fit for human consumption 'waste' valuable nutrients due to conversion losses from 'grain to meat', nutrients that otherwise could sustain people suffering from hunger.

All these complex issues in mind, we invite you to the podium of the Leibniz Research Alliance 'Sustainable Food Production and Healthy Nutrition' (LRA FN) promoting the joint project 'Protein Paradoxes'. Together with external experts* our scientists will discuss alternatives to conventional feeding methods.

- We propose a new approach to animal feed, making stronger use of alternative protein sources like insects, algae and legumes.
- We will dispute whether it makes sense to use concentrated feed, when free-range animals like grazing ruminants could turn grass into valuable protein, whilst pigs, chickens and fish are predestined to upgrade rest streams.
- We also approach systems like Integrated Multi-Trophic Aquaculture (for seafood and fish) or Aquaponics (for freshwater fish), both attempting to apply circular principles found in nature to farming.
- Finally we will consider whether alternative feed production is able to still humanity's growing hunger for animal-based food and to which extend a sustainable production of animal products can be given.

The panelists bring their unique experiences and expertise to the podium, willingly accepting the challenge of debating the topic with an informed and interested audience.

The Leibniz Research Alliance 'Sustainable Food Production and Healthy Nutrition' (LRA FN) pools the competence of 13 Leibniz research institutes from several disciplines in the field of food production and nutrition. It serves as a joint platform for decentralised and independent research of the Alliance partners.

GFFA Expert Panel Discussion 1: SDGs und die Zukunft der Tierhaltung was sind die Erwartungen der internationalen und nationalen Zivilgesellschaft

Das High Level Panel of Experts (HLPE) des Committee on World Food Security (CFS) der FAO hat 2016 einen eigenen Bericht unter dem Titel Sustainable Agricultural Development for Food Security and Nutrition What Roles for Livestock zur internationalen Tierhaltung veröffentlicht. Im Anschluss haben die Mitgliedstaaten des CFS auf dem Bericht basierende Politikempfehlungen verabschiedet. Das CFS zeichnet sich durch seine starke Fokussierung auf den menschenrechtlichen Ansatz, insbesondere das Recht auf Nahrung und eine einzigartige Beteiligung der Zivilgesellschaft aus. Seine Beschlüsse müssen als wegweisend für die Umsetzung von SDG 2 und anderen verbundenen SDGs angesehen werden.

Tierische Erzeugung ist zudem hauptverantwortlich für die hohen Treibhausgasemissionen des landwirtschaftlichen Sektors (SDG 13). Wenn die Nachfrage nach Fleisch so stark steigen wird wie prognostiziert, werden die weltweit führenden Agrarunternehmen versuchen, die Fleischproduktion von aktuell 300 Millionen Tonnen auf 480 Millionen Tonnen im Jahr 2050 zu erhöhen. Die Fleischproduktion würde dann mehr als die Hälfte der weltweiten Treibhausgasemissionen in einem 1,5 Grad-Szenario verursachen, mit negativen Auswirkungen auf Biodiversität, Nahrungsmittelsicherheit und Armut. Jede weitere Entwicklung in der Tierproduktion wird diese massiven Auswirkungen auf das Klima adressieren müssen. Was sind aus zivilgesellschaftlicher Perspektive Vorschläge, um den Klima-Fußabdruck in der tierischen Erzeugung zu verringern? Wie spiegeln sich diese Erkenntnisse in den Entscheidungen, die das CFS der FAO getroffen hat wieder?

Welches sind für die Zivilgesellschaft die wichtigsten Erkenntnisse aus dem Tierhaltungsbericht des CFS? Von welchen der im CFS mit Blick auf Tierhaltung getroffenen Entscheidungen erwartet die Zivilgesellschaft am meisten? Gibt es schon Prozesse zur Umsetzung? Wenn nicht, wo müssten diese initiiert werden? Wie lauten insbesondere die Forderungen von nomadischen Tierhaltern?

Intensive und industrielle Tierhaltung weltweit sind zu großen Teilen auf global gehandelte Futtermittel, insbesondere Soja, angewiesen. Was sind die Folgen für die Menschen und die Natur in der "Soja Republik" Paraguay? Welche Forderungen hat die Zivilgesellschaft an eine nachhaltige und verantwortungsbewusste Tierhaltung?

Wie stellen sich Bäuerinnen und Bauern in Deutschland den Umbau der Tierhaltung hin zu mehr Nachhaltigkeit und Verantwortungsbewusstsein vor? Was sind ihre Forderungen an die deutsche und die europäische Agrarpolitik?

Im Anschluss an kurze thematische Inputs durch die Referentinnen soll auf dem Podium und mit dem Publikum diskutiert werden, wie können diese unterschiedlichen Prozesse am besten zusammenwirken und was sind die gemeinsamen Forderungen an die Politik.

GFFA Expert Panel Discussion 10: International perspectives on more sustainable protein feed

Protein components are essential in livestock feed. Besides those which are produced locally such as feed from grassland, the cultivation and trade of soy and other legumes are vital to meet the demand of protein feed worldwide. The international production and consumption of protein feed is highly concentrated in few countries and regions: North and South America are leading in soy cultivation, and they are facing a growing demand but also criticism for unsustainable agricultural practices and the use of genetically modified soy. Countries in Europe and Asia are major importers which are dependent from imported protein components but at the same time enhance cultivation of soy and other legumes nationally as part of their sustainable agriculture strategies. Recently Hungary and Germany have initiated the European Soy declaration which lines out approaches to be taken in Europe. The panel of experts brings together perspectives and experiences from different regions (Brazil, USA, India, Europe) and market situations to discuss the future trends and challenges in sustainable protein feed with respect to cultivation and responsible sourcing.

GFFA Expert Panel Discussion 7: Climate Protection – Efficiency – Animal Welfare: Challenges and Goal Conflicts of Sustainable Livestock Husbandry in the Context of Global Markets

Livestock farming is a central component of agricultural systems and the circular economy. Through livestock annually 5.16 billion tonnes of feed currently not eaten by humans is transformed into milk, meat and eggs. These products account for more than 40% of the production value from agriculture globally. From a world-wide perspective draught power is also important. However, livestock farming faces a number of challenges in terms of its contribution to food security and safety, animal welfare, biodiversity, resource efficiency and climate change. At the same time, new opportunities derive from the development of new vaccines, genomic selection, genome editing and digitalization. But, demands, risks and chances are not the same in all parts of the world.

At the Forum we aim to initiate a debate about the relationship between animal performance, animal welfare and health as well as climate and environmental protection. This triangular relationship is characterized by biological, ecological and economic factors with advantageous and disadvantageous correlations and conflicting goals, part of which can be solved via scientific innovations but others are not easily resolvable and need a compromise solution. We will question to what extent increased productivity of livestock farming is desirable to decrease its ecological footprint and to meet global demands for products of animal origin. We will also discuss if and how increased productivity and efficiency goes along with animal welfare and health and consumer acceptance.

Representatives of stakeholders (producers, consumers, NGOs and scientists) will contribute to a broad discussion on how a diversified, regionally adapted, sensor- and biomarker-based agriculture can support an eco- and animal-friendly production. Widely accepted compromises and agreements as well as a comprehensive understanding of the physiological and ethological needs of farm animals and of the social, economic and ecological factors on the livestock sector are necessary to empower livestock farmers in order to ensure the global production of healthy food of animal origin.

GFFA Expert Panel Discussion 9: Antimicrobial resistance in Europe and beyond

Antimicrobial resistance, or AMR for short, is arguably the most important a global health issue concerning not only human health but food security, agriculture, livestock, aquaculture, and the environment as well. It already has a negative impact on food safety, consumer confidence, and the sustainability of the agriculture sector. According to certain estimates by the year 2050, it will claim the lives of 10 million people per year, and cause us 2 to 3.5 percent, or USD 100 trillion, decrease in the global gross domestic product (GDP). The vast majority of the estimated losses will mainly occur in low and middle-income countries.

The effect of AMR is amplified by population growth and the increasing demand for animal protein. Resistant microorganisms can emerge from areas of primary food production in the food chain – livestock, aquaculture and crops – and move between animals and humans through direct exposure, consumption, or potentially through a contaminated environment. Due to its cross-sectoral nature it requires a coordinated, “One Health” approach and response, as promoted by many international actors, such as FAO, WHO, OIE, the European Commission and others.

The panel will bring together animal health and livestock experts from across the globe to discuss burning question related to antimicrobial resistance. These might include:

- How can decision makers ensure better monitoring and analysis of antimicrobial resistance and use in food and agriculture?
- What needs to be done to strengthen governance related to antimicrobial resistance and antimicrobial use?
- What kind of good practices exist already on prudent use of antimicrobials in Europe and Central Asia, for example in the intensive and large-scale animal production system?
- Beyond strengthening governance and sharing good practice is there a need to discuss husbandry conditions, production patterns and animal breeding strategies?

GFFA High Level Panels of the European Commission - The Future of Livestock production

Global population growth and greater prosperity are leading to increasing demand for food of animal origin all over the world. Production needs to keep pace in order to meet increased demand. As our natural resources are limited, the world's hunger for animal protein requires sustainable intensification of our livestock husbandry systems.

At the same time, increased demands are being placed on environmentally friendly and climate-smart livestock production. Furthermore, animal welfare considerations and ethical aspects in relation to the use of modern biotechnology determine increasingly the public discussion about modern animal farming.

Animal health risks require international cooperation in controlling diseases and ensuring trade in animals and animal products.

And last not least, keeping animals is an important economic factor in many rural regions around the world.

Responses to these challenges will essentially determine the future of livestock husbandry.

Phil Hogan, European Commissioner for Agriculture and Rural Development will host this ministerial level debate. It will feature a roundtable policy discussion between ministers in the midst of the audience – using the “centre court” format. This panel focuses on an active engagement with all participants and the audience with the aim of identifying appropriate policy responses and best practice examples for a sustainable, efficient and responsible livestock production.

14:00 - 16:00

GFFA High Level Panels of the OIE - Animal Health and Welfare: Two cornerstones for the future of globally diversified livestock production

In the current context of increased animal protein demand, a rise in ecological instability and globalised movements of people, animals and products, improving animal health and welfare worldwide has become a prerequisite to face challenges of the future in a safer way. Animal health and welfare should be two cornerstones of a global transition to sustainable, responsible and efficient livestock production models.

Hundreds of millions of people still depend on their livestock for income, directly linking animal production to their livelihood. However experts estimate that each year up to 20% production losses are attributed to animal diseases around the world. In addition, the society claims for a world where the welfare of animals is respected, promoted and advanced, in ways that meet the requirements of sustainability, climate stewardship and economic efficiency likewise.

The existence of animal health and welfare measures, transparency mechanisms and resilient animal health systems that allow development of countries, and prevention and control of animal diseases, is consequently more than ever essential to protect food safety and security, as well as human health, the economy and social well-being of populations.

'Source of diversity' - The initiative 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' makes Hall 2.2, the Floral Hall, bloom

From 19 to 28 January 2018 the International Green Week Berlin will be presenting a completely new concept for its Floral Hall. The Landgard initiative 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' has been planned to enable visitors to this popular show to experience flowers and other plants in a particularly intensive and active way. Under the slogan of 'Source of diversity', Hall 2.2 will feature a creative display of the widest possible range of topics from the world of flowers and plants. "In staging this display our aim is to revitalise the image of flowers and plants and to create a better and more lasting impression of this sector and its products. We will be showing just how fascinating, varied, exciting, beautiful and modern the world of flowers and plants is", explains Armin Rehberg, chairman of the board of Landgard eG. With a membership of 3,200 businesses and companies, Landgard is one of the largest European marketing organisations for flowers and plants, as well as for fruit and vegetables.

Covering an area of 6,000 square metres, the Floral Hall has been designed to feature the achievements of the green sector, with many early flowering plants, creative floral arrangements, numerous points at which young and old alike can get involved, workshops, and innovative approaches for using flowers and plants to produce a modern urban landscape. "The Floral Hall welcomes visitors with all that is modern, aesthetically pleasing and exciting in the green sector", according to Rehberg. Flowers and plants as a source of diversity with thematic areas devoted to the subjects of love, life, beauty, enjoyment, economy and creativity, represent a completely new conceptual approach for the Floral Hall.

Among the displays on smaller areas in the Floral Hall are those by the National Horticultural Association (ZVG), the Berlin Regional Association of Gardening Enthusiasts, the Schools-Environmental Centre for the Mitte District / Gardening School and the publishing company Bauernverlag. The media partner radioBERLIN 88,8 is presenting a daily programme on the stage with live reporting.

Green City at the heart of the Floral Hall

The 'Source of diversity' can be found right in the middle of the Floral Hall. "With its transparent facades, this source, designated the 'Green City', provides a quiet space for visitors to the fair and stands out from the rest of the hall. It also presents the subject of flowers and plants in urban spaces. Many actual examples are provided to show visitors how flowers and plants can be integrated in a modern urban setting, thereby enhancing it. Grey, depressing concrete deserts are a thing of the past, and now flowers and plants are taking over again in cities, becoming an indispensable aspect of contemporary urban planning.

world of flowers and plants. "In staging this display our aim is to revitalise the image of flowers and plants and to create a better and more lasting impression of this sector and its products. We will be showing just how fascinating, varied, exciting, beautiful and modern the world of flowers and plants is", explains Armin Rehberg, chairman of the board of Landgard eG. With a membership of 3,200 businesses and companies, Landgard is one of the largest European marketing organisations for flowers and plants, as well as for fruit and vegetables.

Covering an area of 6,000 square metres, the Floral Hall has been designed to feature the achievements of the green sector, with many early flowering plants, creative floral arrangements, numerous points at which young and old alike can get involved, workshops, and innovative approaches for using flowers and plants to produce a modern urban landscape. "The Floral Hall welcomes visitors with all that is modern, aesthetically pleasing and exciting in the green sector", according to Rehberg. Flowers and plants as a source of diversity with thematic areas devoted to the subjects of love, life, beauty, enjoyment, economy and creativity, represent a completely new conceptual approach for the Floral Hall.

Among the displays on smaller areas in the Floral Hall are those by the National Horticultural Association (ZVG), the Berlin Regional Association of Gardening Enthusiasts, the Schools-Environmental Centre for the Mitte District / Gardening School and the publishing company Bauernverlag. The media partner radioBERLIN 88,8 is presenting a daily programme on the stage with live reporting.

'Keen on the country' at the Green Week - Modern rural life: neighbourly, embracing all the generations, and increasingly digital

Category	Date	Time:	Location
Public Event	January 19, 2018	10:30 - 16:00	Hall 4.2, LandSchau-Stage

A variety of different topics dealing with modern rural life awaits visitors in Hall 4.2 at the International Green Week Berlin 2018. From 19 to 28 January exhibitors from country areas will be presenting their ideas for villages and regions that are a pleasure to live in, and with their initiatives and projects they are bringing the subject of rural development alive and making it easily understandable.

Some of the aspects that visitors can learn about include the possibilities being presented by digitalisation, what 'co-working spaces' are, how to organise active neighbourhood assistance or a meeting place for different generations, what can be done when a village suddenly loses its shop, and how to safeguard health care and mobility. By means of an app visitors can locate regional products and learn to identify meat from animals that have been raised humanely. There are many opportunities to get actively involved, as an enjoyable way of discovering more about rural regions, and there are some attractive prizes to be won as well. And more information and entertainment is being provided by the Land Show stage programme, presented by Heike Götz and Petra Schwarz and organised by the Agro-Social Society.

The Berlin Agriculture Ministers' Conference is the political highlight of the GFFA. It is the largest conference of agriculture ministers in the world and gives impetus to international debates at the beginning of every year.

In 2018 the 10th Berlin Agriculture Ministers' Conference (not public) will take place in the Federal Ministry for Economic Affairs and Energy. The conference brings together political decision-makers from around the world to discuss the main topic. A final communiqué formulates the common position of the agriculture ministers and is incorporated into the ongoing international discourse on agricultural policy.

In January 2017, 83 states attended the Berlin Agriculture Ministers' Conference on the subject "Agriculture and Water – Key to Feeding the World", as well as high-level representatives of international organisations such as the European Commission and the FAO. Together they adopted an ambitious communiqué and committed to a sustainable stewardship of water.

'Source of diversity' - The initiative 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' makes Hall 2.2, the Floral Hall, bloom

From 19 to 28 January 2018 the International Green Week Berlin will be presenting a completely new concept for its Floral Hall. The Landgard initiative 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' has been planned to enable visitors to this popular show to experience flowers and other plants in a particularly intensive and active way. Under the slogan of 'Source of diversity', Hall 2.2 will feature a creative display of the widest possible range of topics from the world of flowers and plants. "In staging this display our aim is to revitalise the image of flowers and plants and to create a better and more lasting impression of this sector and its products. We will be showing just how fascinating, varied, exciting, beautiful and modern the world of flowers and plants is", explains Armin Rehberg, chairman of the board of Landgard eG. With a membership of 3,200 businesses and companies, Landgard is one of the largest European marketing organisations for flowers and plants, as well as for fruit and vegetables.

Covering an area of 6,000 square metres, the Floral Hall has been designed to feature the achievements of the green sector, with many early flowering plants, creative floral arrangements, numerous points at which young and old alike can get involved, workshops, and innovative approaches for using flowers and plants to produce a modern urban landscape. "The Floral Hall welcomes visitors with all that is modern, aesthetically pleasing and exciting in the green sector", according to Rehberg. Flowers and plants as a source of diversity with thematic areas devoted to the subjects of love, life, beauty, enjoyment, economy and creativity, represent a completely new conceptual approach for the Floral Hall.

Among the displays on smaller areas in the Floral Hall are those by the National Horticultural Association (ZVG), the Berlin Regional Association of Gardening Enthusiasts, the Schools-Environmental Centre for the Mitte District / Gardening School and the publishing company Bauernverlag. The media partner radioBERLIN 88,8 is presenting a daily programme on the stage with live reporting.

Green City at the heart of the Floral Hall

The 'Source of diversity' can be found right in the middle of the Floral Hall. "With its transparent facades, this source, designated the 'Green City', provides a quiet space for visitors to the fair and stands out from the rest of the hall. It also presents the subject of flowers and plants in urban spaces. Many actual examples are provided to show visitors how flowers and plants can be integrated in a modern urban setting, thereby enhancing it. Grey, depressing concrete deserts are a thing of the past, and now flowers and plants are taking over again in cities, becoming an indispensable aspect of contemporary urban planning.

'Keen on the country' at the Green Week - Modern rural life: neighbourly, embracing all the generations, and increasingly digital

Category	Date	Time:	Location
Public Event	January 21, 2018	11:00 - 17:00	Hall 4.2, LandSchau-Stage

A variety of different topics dealing with modern rural life awaits visitors in Hall 4.2 at the International Green Week Berlin 2018. From 19 to 28 January exhibitors from country areas will be presenting their ideas for villages and regions that are a pleasure to live in, and with their initiatives and projects they are bringing the subject of rural development alive and making it easily understandable.

Some of the aspects that visitors can learn about include the possibilities being presented by digitalisation, what 'co-working spaces' are, how to organise active neighbourhood assistance or a meeting place for different generations, what can be done when a village suddenly loses its shop, and how to safeguard health care and mobility. By means of an app visitors can locate regional products and learn to identify meat from animals that have been raised humanely. There are many opportunities to get actively involved, as an enjoyable way of discovering more about rural regions, and there are some attractive prizes to be won as well. And more information and entertainment is being provided by the Land Show stage programme, presented by Heike Götz and Petra Schwarz and organised by the Agro-Social Society.

The new IFS Food Version 6.1 – The prerequisite for supplying European retailers

Category	Date	Time:	Location
Trade Event	January 22, 2018	10:00 - 11:00	Marshallhaus

Would you like to deliver your products to European retailers? Do you know what you have to do to prove that you can produce a safe product in line with your client's specifications? Have you already implemented a food fraud risk management system?

The demand of consumers is always increasing and the food industry has to take this into consideration.

Having a look on the newest development, products from small and medium size producers are more and more sold in addition to the A-brands on the shelves of European supermarkets. Furthermore the market share of private label products increases. But there is one thing all of them have in common: They have to fulfill the requirements for food safety, product integrity and basic product quality. These three essentials should be fundamental for every business in the food industry worldwide.

To ensure the safety and quality of their products, retailers conduct different audits with several checklists to see if their clients' processes guarantee safety and integrity.

That is why in 2002, the IFS started to develop uniform checklists. Together with European retailers and manufacturers as well as service providers such as logisticians, brokers and certification bodies performing the audits, the standards were continuously improved.

That's why the IFS became globally accepted as a proof for product safety and quality, required by the majority of European retailers.

The IFS presentation given by the IFS Managing Director, Stephan Tromp, will give you an overview on what the IFS is, about the network behind the Standards and what it means to be certified against IFS. Furthermore the new IFS Food Standard version 6.1 which comes into force in summer 2018 will be presented with a special focus on the new requirements for Food Fraud.

‘Keen on the country’ at the Green Week - Modern rural life: neighbourly, embracing all the generations, and increasingly digital

Category	Date	Time:	Location
Public Event	January 22, 2018	10:15 - 17:15	Hall 4.2, LandSchau-Stage

A variety of different topics dealing with modern rural life awaits visitors in Hall 4.2 at the International Green Week Berlin 2018. From 19 to 28 January exhibitors from country areas will be presenting their ideas for villages and regions that are a pleasure to live in, and with their initiatives and projects they are bringing the subject of rural development alive and making it easily understandable.

Some of the aspects that visitors can learn about include the possibilities being presented by digitalisation, what ‘co-working spaces’ are, how to organise active neighbourhood assistance or a meeting place for different generations, what can be done when a village suddenly loses its shop, and how to safeguard health care and mobility. By means of an app visitors can locate regional products and learn to identify meat from animals that have been raised humanely. There are many opportunities to get actively involved, as an enjoyable way of discovering more about rural regions, and there are some attractive prizes to be won as well. And more information and entertainment is being provided by the Land Show stage programme, presented by Heike Götz and Petra Schwarz and organised by the Agro-Social Society.

Fuels of the Future 2018

Category	Date	Time:	Location
Trade Event	January 23, 2018	09:00 - 16:30	CityCube Berlin

Overview of topics:

Framework conditions for renewable mobility of the future

The role of biofuels in climate protection and development of renewable mobility. The German government's mobility and fuel strategy. What prospects does EU policy offer for renewable mobility in the run-up to 2030 and beyond? Renewable mobility in Europe – differing perceptions of political decision-makers and the industry. From multimodality to robotaxi – what do we need on roads to ensure the energy turnaround?

The future of combustion engines: Revolution in drive systems and fuels

What development prospects exist for a drive and fuel revolution in the energy sector? What prospects exist for science, the automotive industry and civil society?

Biofuels established on the market

Biodiesel, bioethanol, vegetable oils – which market developments should we be monitoring? What kind of technological optimisation can we expect? Presentation of results from various research projects examining biodiesel. Emission reduction potential of ethanol-containing petrol fuels. Outlook for trade and market development and the availability of feedstocks for biofuels.

Electromobility

Future of electromobility: Electric drives in conjunction with internal combustion engines or pure electric drives? What is the state of play in infrastructure expansion to ensure electromobility can be rolled out across the country?

Biomethane and power-to-X

Which opportunities and obstacles exist for biofuels produced from biomethane? Which synergies between power-to-gas and biomethane production can be identified? How has biomethane developed compared with international standards? Comparison of the climate impact of drive systems: fossil fuels, bio, PtX or battery.

New biofuels

What prospects exist for biofuel production from carbon recycling? What technical challenges arise in recycling waste into biofuels? Importance of liquid alternative fuels for climate protection and market development.

Parallel forums

During the two-day conference, market developments, current research results and practical experience with market-tested and new biofuels will be presented in 13 forums and a panel discussion. This year we are again expecting over 500 international participants.

'Source of diversity' - The initiative 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' makes Hall 2.2, the Floral Hall, bloom

From 19 to 28 January 2018 the International Green Week Berlin will be presenting a completely new concept for its Floral Hall. The Landgard initiative 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' has been planned to enable visitors to this popular show to experience flowers and other plants in a particularly intensive and active way. Under the slogan of 'Source of diversity', Hall 2.2 will feature a creative display of the widest possible range of topics from the world of flowers and plants. "In staging this display our aim is to revitalise the image of flowers and plants and to create a better and more lasting impression of this sector and its products. We will be showing just how fascinating, varied, exciting, beautiful and modern the world of flowers and plants is", explains Armin Rehberg, chairman of the board of Landgard eG. With a membership of 3,200 businesses and companies, Landgard is one of the largest European marketing organisations for flowers and plants, as well as for fruit and vegetables.

Covering an area of 6,000 square metres, the Floral Hall has been designed to feature the achievements of the green sector, with many early flowering plants, creative floral arrangements, numerous points at which young and old alike can get involved, workshops, and innovative approaches for using flowers and plants to produce a modern urban landscape. "The Floral Hall welcomes visitors with all that is modern, aesthetically pleasing and exciting in the green sector", according to Rehberg. Flowers and plants as a source of diversity with thematic areas devoted to the subjects of love, life, beauty, enjoyment, economy and creativity, represent a completely new conceptual approach for the Floral Hall.

Among the displays on smaller areas in the Floral Hall are those by the National Horticultural Association (ZVG), the Berlin Regional Association of Gardening Enthusiasts, the Schools-Environmental Centre for the Mitte District / Gardening School and the publishing company Bauernverlag. The media partner radioBERLIN 88,8 is presenting a daily programme on the stage with live reporting.

Green City at the heart of the Floral Hall

The 'Source of diversity' can be found right in the middle of the Floral Hall. "With its transparent facades, this source, designated the 'Green City', provides a quiet space for visitors to the fair and stands out from the rest of the hall. It also presents the subject of flowers and plants in urban spaces. Many actual examples are provided to show visitors how flowers and plants can be integrated in a modern urban setting, thereby enhancing it. Grey, depressing concrete deserts are a thing of the past, and now flowers and plants are taking over again in cities, becoming an indispensable aspect of contemporary urban planning.

'Keen on the country' at the Green Week - Modern rural life: neighbourly, embracing all the generations, and increasingly digital

Category	Date	Time:	Location
Public Event	January 23, 2018	10:30 - 17:00	Hall 4.2, LandSchau-Stage

A variety of different topics dealing with modern rural life awaits visitors in Hall 4.2 at the International Green Week Berlin 2018. From 19 to 28 January exhibitors from country areas will be presenting their ideas for villages and regions that are a pleasure to live in, and with their initiatives and projects they are bringing the subject of rural development alive and making it easily understandable.

Some of the aspects that visitors can learn about include the possibilities being presented by digitalisation, what 'co-working spaces' are, how to organise active neighbourhood assistance or a meeting place for different generations, what can be done when a village suddenly loses its shop, and how to safeguard health care and mobility. By means of an app visitors can locate regional products and learn to identify meat from animals that have been raised humanely. There are many opportunities to get actively involved, as an enjoyable way of discovering more about rural regions, and there are some attractive prizes to be won as well. And more information and entertainment is being provided by the Land Show stage programme, presented by Heike Götz and Petra Schwarz and organised by the Agro-Social Society.

'Source of diversity' - The initiative 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' makes Hall 2.2, the Floral Hall, bloom

From 19 to 28 January 2018 the International Green Week Berlin will be presenting a completely new concept for its Floral Hall. The Landgard initiative 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' has been planned to enable visitors to this popular show to experience flowers and other plants in a particularly intensive and active way. Under the slogan of 'Source of diversity', Hall 2.2 will feature a creative display of the widest possible range of topics from the world of flowers and plants. "In staging this display our aim is to revitalise the image of flowers and plants and to create a better and more lasting impression of this sector and its products. We will be showing just how fascinating, varied, exciting, beautiful and modern the world of flowers and plants is", explains Armin Rehberg, chairman of the board of Landgard eG. With a membership of 3,200 businesses and companies, Landgard is one of the largest European marketing organisations for flowers and plants, as well as for fruit and vegetables.

'Keen on the country' at the Green Week - Modern rural life: neighbourly, embracing all the generations, and increasingly digital

Category	Date	Time:	Location
Public Event	January 25, 2018	10:10 - 17:00	Hall 4.2, LandSchau-Stage

A variety of different topics dealing with modern rural life awaits visitors in Hall 4.2 at the International Green Week Berlin 2018. From 19 to 28 January exhibitors from country areas will be presenting their ideas for villages and regions that are a pleasure to live in, and with their initiatives and projects they are bringing the subject of rural development alive and making it easily understandable.

Some of the aspects that visitors can learn about include the possibilities being presented by digitalisation, what 'co-working spaces' are, how to organise active neighbourhood assistance or a meeting place for different generations, what can be done when a village suddenly loses its shop, and how to safeguard health care and mobility. By means of an app visitors can locate regional products and learn to identify meat from animals that have been raised humanely. There are many opportunities to get actively involved, as an enjoyable way of discovering more about rural regions, and there are some attractive prizes to be won as well. And more information and entertainment is being provided by the Land Show stage programme, presented by Heike Götz and Petra Schwarz and organised by the Agro-Social Society.

Flowers 1000 good reasons

Category	Date	Time:	Location
Public Event	January 27, 2018	10:00 - 18:00	Hall 2.2 - Flowerhall

From 19 to 28 January 2018 the International Green Week Berlin will be presenting a completely new concept for its Floral Hall. The Landgard initiative 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' has been planned to enable visitors to this popular show to experience flowers and other plants in a particularly intensive and active way. Under the slogan of 'Source of diversity', Hall 2.2 will feature a creative display of the widest possible range of topics from the world of flowers and plants. "In staging this display our aim is to revitalise the image of flowers and plants and to create a better and more lasting impression of this sector and its products. We will be showing just how fascinating, varied, exciting, beautiful and modern the world of flowers and plants is", explains Armin Rehberg, chairman of the board of Landgard eG. With a membership of 3,200 businesses and companies, Landgard is one of the largest European marketing organisations for flowers and plants, as well as for fruit and vegetables.

Covering an area of 6,000 square metres, the Floral Hall has been designed to feature the achievements of the green sector, with many early flowering plants, creative floral arrangements, numerous points at which young and old alike can get involved, workshops, and innovative approaches for using flowers and plants to produce a modern urban landscape. "The Floral Hall welcomes visitors with all that is modern, aesthetically pleasing and exciting in the green sector", according to Rehberg. Flowers and plants as a source of diversity with thematic areas devoted to the subjects of love, life, beauty, enjoyment, economy and creativity, represent a completely new conceptual approach for the Floral Hall.

Among the displays on smaller areas in the Floral Hall are those by the National Horticultural Association (ZVG), the Berlin Regional Association of Gardening Enthusiasts, the Schools-Environmental Centre for the Mitte District / Gardening School and the publishing company Bauernverlag. The media partner radioBERLIN 88,8 is presenting a daily programme on the stage with live reporting.

'Keen on the country' at the Green Week - Modern rural life: neighbourly, embracing all the generations, and increasingly digital

Category	Date	Time:	Location
Public Event	January 27, 2018	11:00 - 16:15	Hall 4.2, LandSchau-Stage

A variety of different topics dealing with modern rural life awaits visitors in Hall 4.2 at the International Green Week Berlin 2018. From 19 to 28 January exhibitors from country areas will be presenting their ideas for villages and regions that are a pleasure to live in, and with their initiatives and projects they are bringing the subject of rural development alive and making it easily understandable.

Some of the aspects that visitors can learn about include the possibilities being presented by digitalisation, what 'co-working spaces' are, how to organise active neighbourhood assistance or a meeting place for different generations, what can be done when a village suddenly loses its shop, and how to safeguard health care and mobility. By means of an app visitors can locate regional products and learn to identify meat from animals that have been raised humanely. There are many opportunities to get actively involved, as an enjoyable way of discovering more about rural regions, and there are some attractive prizes to be won as well. And more information and entertainment is being provided by the Land Show stage programme, presented by Heike Götz and Petra Schwarz and organised by the Agro-Social Society.

‘Source of diversity’ - The initiative ‘Flowers – 1,000 good reasons’ makes Hall 2.2, the Floral Hall, bloom

From 19 to 28 January 2018 the International Green Week Berlin will be presenting a completely new concept for its Floral Hall. The Landgard initiative ‘Flowers – 1,000 good reasons’ has been planned to enable visitors to this popular show to experience flowers and other plants in a particularly intensive and active way. Green City at the heart of the Floral Hall

The ‘Source of diversity’ can be found right in the middle of the Floral Hall. “With its transparent facades, this source, designated the ‘Green City’, provides a quiet space for visitors to the fair and stands out from the rest of the hall. It also presents the subject of flowers and plants in urban spaces. Many actual examples are provided to show visitors how flowers and plants can be integrated in a modern urban setting, thereby enhancing it. Grey, depressing concrete deserts are a thing of the past, and now flowers and plants are taking over again in cities, becoming an indispensable aspect of contemporary urban planning.
