'Nature in all its Diversity'

With its display entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' in the Floral Hall (Hall 9), Landgard is showing a whole new world of blossoming, creative, useful and beautiful flowers and plants

From 17 to 26 January 2020, when winter in Berlin is still cold and grey, spring will appear in all its colours on the Berlin Exhibition Grounds. That is when Landgard and the project entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' will let nature unfold in the shape of thousands of spring flowers and lively greenery in the Floral Hall (Hall 9) at the International Green Week 2020.

In 2020 the Floral Hall will be following a new design trend that stays true to nature in everything we do. Along with it, under the slogan of 'Nature in all its diversity', flowers and plants will be returning to their normal habitat. A many-faceted spring landscape featuring flowers, grass and shrubs will make up the central design element of the hall. Paths crossing this colourfully arranged area will lure visitors away from the bustle of the fair and let them enjoy floral beauty first-hand. Visitors can participate in numerous activities where they can try out their creative skills and make beautiful pieces of work to take home. Thus, together with strong partners, and with their offer of exciting activities and prize competitions, Landgard and the project entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' will be inviting visitors to enjoy the fascination of flowers and plants in their natural habitat every day at the fair.

Rice plays an important role in Thailand as the main commodity for the nation's agricultural exports as well as a major staple food for the Thai population and livelihoods for smallholder farmers. Ensuring sustainability in the rice sector therefore is an important entry point to ensure sustainable livelihoods of farmers, and contribution of the sector to food security, poverty alleviation.

Under Thai-German relations, in cooperation with GIZ, Sustainable Rice Platform (SRP) and other private partners, several cooperation projects have been implemented since 2011 with the view to develop successful models and scaling up strategies for sustainable rice production and value chains.

To date, the projects have demonstrated improvement in economic, social and environmental aspects. In terms of the economic aspect, small farmers have shown clear reduction of production costs, improvement on product safety and quality, increase net profits and enhance their competitiveness in foreign markets as well as strengthen their capacity in sustainable rice production. For the social aspect, people will have enough rice for consumption at fair prices, and there will be more local employment. Regarding the environmental aspect, sustainable rice production will help increase natural resource use efficiency, minimize environmental and climate impacts (i.e. open burning, soil deterioration, greenhouse gas emissions, etc.). In addition, more farmers will be encouraged to adopt environmentally friendly systems, leading to greater market opportunities in today's world market trend. It is also a critical approach for Thai farmers to be accepted by the global community in helping to reduce global warming.

While considerable progress has been made, achieving such endeavor requires wider collaboration and partnership. This Side Event will be organized when Landgard and the project entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' will let nature unfold in the shape of thousands of spring flowers and lively greenery in the Floral Hall (Hall 9) at the International Green Week 2020.

In 2020 the Floral Hall will be following a new design trend that stays true to nature in everything we do. Along with it, under the slogan of 'Nature in all its diversity', flowers and plants will be returning to their normal habitat. A many-faceted spring landscape featuring flowers, grass and shrubs will make up the central design element of the hall. Paths crossing this colourfully arranged area will lure visitors away from the bustle of the fair and let them enjoy floral beauty first-hand. Visitors can participate in numerous activities where they can try out their creative skills and make beautiful pieces of work to take home. Thus, together with strong partners, and with their offer of exciting activities and prize competitions, Landgard and the project entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' will be inviting visitors to enjoy the fascination of flowers and plants in their natural habitat every day at the fair.

'Nature in all its Diversity'

With its display entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' in the Floral Hall (Hall 9), Landgard is showing a whole new world of blossoming, creative, useful and beautiful flowers and plants

From 17 to 26 January 2020, when winter in Berlin is still cold and grey, spring will appear in all its colours on the Berlin Exhibition Grounds. That is when Landgard and the project entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' will let nature unfold in the shape of thousands of spring flowers and lively greenery in the Floral Hall (Hall 9) at the International Green Week 2020.

In 2020 the Floral Hall will be following a new design trend that stays true to nature in everything we do. Along with it, under the slogan of 'Nature in all its diversity', flowers and plants will be returning to their normal habitat. A many-faceted spring landscape featuring flowers, grass and shrubs will make up the central design element of the hall. Paths crossing this colourfully arranged area will lure visitors away from the bustle of the fair and let them enjoy floral beauty first-hand. Visitors can participate in numerous activities where they can try out their creative skills and make beautiful pieces of work to take home. Thus, together with strong partners, and with their offer of exciting activities and prize competitions, Landgard and the project entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' will be inviting visitors to enjoy the fascination of flowers and plants in their natural habitat every day at the fair.

'Nature in all its Diversity'

With its display entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' in the Floral Hall (Hall 9), Landgard is showing a whole new world of blossoming, creative, useful and beautiful flowers and plants

From 17 to 26 January 2020, when winter in Berlin is still cold and grey, spring will appear in all its colours on the Berlin Exhibition Grounds. That is when Landgard and the project entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' will let nature unfold in the shape of thousands of spring flowers and lively greenery in the Floral Hall (Hall 9) at the International Green Week 2020.

In 2020 the Floral Hall will be following a new design trend that stays true to nature in everything we do. Along with it, under the slogan of 'Nature in all its diversity', flowers and plants will be returning to their normal habitat. A many-faceted spring landscape featuring flowers, grass and shrubs will make up the central design element of the hall. Paths crossing this colourfully arranged area will lure visitors away from the bustle of the fair and let them enjoy floral beauty first-hand. Visitors can participate in numerous activities where they can try out their creative skills and make beautiful pieces of work to take home. Thus, together with strong partners, and with their offer of exciting activities and prize competitions, Landgard and the project entitled 'Flowers – 1,000 good reasons' will be inviting visitors to enjoy the fascination of flowers and plants in their natural habitat every day at the fair.
